Laurel Wilt Disease is a destructive disease of redbay (Persea borbonia), and other species within the laurel family (Lauraceae) caused by a vascular wilt fungus (Raffaelea lauricola) that is vectored by the redbay ambrosia beetle (Xyleborus glabratus). The pathogen has been confirmed through laboratory analysis of host samples collected in the counties highlighted.

Distribution of Counties with Laurel Wilt Disease* by year of Initial Detection

Initial Detection of Xyleborus glabratus - May 2002
Port Wentworth, GA

Updated: August 22, 2019

* Laurel Wilt Disease is a destructive disease of redbay (Persea borbonia), and other species within the laurel family (Lauraceae) caused by a vascular wilt fungus (Raffaelea lauricola) that is vectored by the redbay ambrosia beetle (Xyleborus glabratus). The pathogen has been confirmed through laboratory analysis of host samples collected in the counties highlighted.

Information Provided By:
- Alabama: Dana McReynolds Stones, Dana.McReynolds@forestry.alabama.gov
- Arkansas: Chandler Barton, Chandler.Barton@arkansas.gov
- Florida: Jeff Eickwort, Jeffrey.Eickwort@freshfromflorida.com
- Georgia: Chip Bates, cbates@gfc.state.ga.us
- Kentucky: Abe Nielsen, Abe.nielsen@ky.gov
- Louisiana: Brent Cutrer, mcuter@ldaf.state.la.us
- Mississippi: John J. Riggins, jriggins@entomology.msstate.edu
- North Carolina: Rob Trickel, rob.trickel@ncagr.gov
- South Carolina: David Jenkins, Djenkins@scfc.gov
- Tennessee: Sam Gildiner, Sam.gildiner@tn.gov
- Texas: Shane Harrington, sharrington@tfs.tamu.edu
- Virginia: Jana Driscoll, jdriscoll@virginia.gov
- West Virginia: Chris Adkins, Chris.A.0512@gmail.com
- Wisconsin: Dylan Styer, Dylan.Styer@wisc.edu
- Wyoming: Jeff Fravel, Jeff.fravel@wyo.gov
- Additional states may be available. For more information, please contact the respective state agencies listed above.